Activities: Aurora G. Morcillo, Associate Professor History and Women's Studies, proved to be an exceptionally nice and supportive colleague from the very first contact through e-mail till the last moment of my stay at FIU. Not only did she efficiently arrange the professional environment for me (access to office space and library, meetings with other faculty members from different departments of FIU specializing in my academic discipline, classes with students) but she also cared for the friendly and socializing atmosphere of my family's leisure time. Facilities Academic evaluation: I believe the time spent at the research at FIU to be extremely productive and profitable. The library resources provided to me turned out to be abundant as far as my academic interests are concerned. Moreover, on many occasions I had a chance to meet other faculty to exchange ideas and discuss different issues which was a thought-provoking and inspiring experience. I also had a chance to participate in Prof. Morcillo's classes, where I could meet and converse with her students. Final remarks: Overall my evaluation of the grant I received from GEMMA Action 3 and my subsequent stay at FIU is highly positive. I enjoyed and profited from my research a lot and only wished it could last longer. The action offers wonderful academic opportunities for young researchers seeking international contacts.

Mobility period: 28 December – 1 February, 2010

Activities: I found my visit at Florida International University enriching and satisfying. I participated fully in the faculty activities, met several faculty members and enjoyed several extra curricular events. I taught a couple of guest lectures in the course taught by my coordinator, Prof Aurora Morcillo, as well as gave a seminar for graduate students. I found both opportunities to be highly satisfactory and stimulating. My coordinator at FIU (Prof Morcillo) was helpful, enthusiastic and extremely friendly. We have been discussing each others' work. That connection resulted in various forms of cooperation: Prof Morcillo gave a lecture for the NOISE summerschool I have been co-coordinating this year in Granada, and recommended me for the Mellon Scholarship of the Wolfsonian Museum in Miami, which I was subsequently awarded.

Mobility period: 14 March – 11 April, 2010

Activities: The 4 week period at FIU in Miami was extremely productive research –wise. I was able to complete a research paper on masculinities in post-communist Central and Eastern Europe and to continue research on another project examining reading groups in the workplace. I carried out 7 interviews with members of the Women's Faculty Book Club situated at FIU during my visit, and was also able to complete the literature review for the paper during the scholarship period. The members of staff in Women's Studies at FIU were extremely helpful in giving assistance in organising my trip/ accommodation and during my stay. A real effort was made to make me feel welcome and particular thanks go to Aurora Morcillo (GEMMA coordinator at FIU), Laurie Shrage (Director of Women's Studies) and Paula Powell (Women's Studies Administrator) for all their help. I was invited to attend seminars/conferences/events taking place within and outside FIU by staff. The trip was also very useful in developing links with academics at FIU, not just within the Women's Studies department, but also more broadly within the University (for instance with Dawn Addy in the Labor Centre), and it is hoped that further connections/collaborations can be made between Women's Studies at FIU and Gender Studies at Hull in the future. We discussed the possibility of future links between the two universities, particularly if FIU develops a Masters' level programme, and we hope in the future to discuss again opportunities for further teaching/research exchanges. For me it was also very useful to observe how another Women's Studies centre organises and manages its programmes and highlighted, for instance, the importance of good publicity, especially website information, in developing programmes, as well as possibilities for on-line teaching within Gender Studies programmes.

Activities: I have worked very efficiently on my research there. The library access was very smooth and the rich resources that I could use there proved to be very helpful for my research project and let me rethink and critically approach its structure, assumptions and objectives. I believe the time spent there was very productive and fruitful as far as the advancement of my academic work is concerned. I also had time to discuss my ideas with other faculty members who were always willing to exchange comments and give academic advice. This was actually a very nice opportunity to consult the project (which is still in its preliminary phase and as such still needs a critical evaluation) and have some constructive feedback and interesting criticism. A contact with scholars at FIU was also an interesting experience – we had several discussions concerning both my and their fields of research which was, I believe, beneficial for both sides.

Activities: La acogida por parte de esta investigadora y de las profesoras del Seminario, especialmente Nora Domínguez y su directora, Dora Barrancos, a quienes vimos posteriormente, fue exquisita. No tuve constancia de que hubiera ninguna actividad académica programada, ni fui invitada a ninguna, salvo en el seminario que yo misma organicé, en colaboración con el propio IIEG y junto con investigadoras de mi grupo de investigación que se desplazaron a Buenos Aires en las mismas fechas. Durante los meses anteriores a nuestra llegada propusimos y acordamos celebrar un seminario internacional sobre temas comunes de investigación, que titulamos Seminario Internacional Anticoncepción, maternidades y derechos de la salud en los siglos XIX y XX los días 10 y 11 de junio de 2010, con participación como ponentes de 17 investigadoras e investigadores de Argentina, Brasil y España. Por mi parte, además de la organización presenté una ponencia. Asistieron cerca de 40 personas (ponentes, alumnado de la Universidad de Buenos Aires, alumnas españolas del Máster Erasmus Mundus GEMMA y activistas argentinas/os por los derechos reproductivos). Hubo una activa participación y contribuyó a ampliar y consolidar lazos de colaboración.

Activities:

A nivel personal mi estancia fue infinitamente provechosa en lo que concierne al avance de mi investigación en feminismo y teoría filmica. Para empezar tuve la oportunidad de ponerme en contacto con la comisión directiva de la prestigiosa revista Signs, cuya editora principal es, además, la coordinadora de la GEMMA World en la universidad de Rutgers, Mary Hawkesworth. En particular discutimos la posibilidad de contribuir con mis publicaciones a la sección de “Films for the English Classroom.” Tuve también la inmensa suerte de establecer contacto con Kayo Dendra, directora de la biblioteca en Estudios de las Mujeres de la universidad (Mabel Smith Douglass library) y con Joan Sloane, directora de la sección de medios audiovisuales de la misma. Ambas fueron muy amables y no sólo me ayudaron en las búsquedas de artículos, libros y dvds sino que muchas veces incluso sugirieron nuevas fuentes y me pusieron en contacto con otras bibliotecas de los estados de Nueva Jersey y de Filadelfia para acceder a fondos de fuera de la propia universidad. Como resultado de esta estancia he terminado dos capítulos para sendas publicaciones y acabo de comenzar un volumen sobre “Critical Nostalgia in literature and film” en colaboración con otras dos colegas participantes en GEMMA.

A nivel institucional y en mi calidad de coordinadora general del GEMMA la estancia ha servido para conocer de primera mano el funcionamiento de una de las instituciones participantes en GEMMA World que esperamos pueda incorporarse en la nueva fase de GEMMA. A tal efecto tuve varias reuniones con los directores de los programas de grado y postgrado (Carlos Decena y Anna Sampaio, respectivamente), la directora del Departamento de Estudios de las Mujeres y de Género, Leslie Fishbein y Joanna Regulska, decana y delegada del rector para las Relaciones Internacionales. Como resultado de estas reuniones hemos afianzado la colaboración entre el consorcio GEMMA y la universidad de Rutgers y avanzado en la futura inserción de esta universidad dentro de dicho consorcio.

Activities: Since I went to Rutgers with very specific research plans and a thoroughly designed project, my tenure there was extremely productive. The Women’s and Gender Studies Department created such scholarly conditions and amiable atmosphere that I could carry out my project very smoothly. In fact, there was much value added, since I achieved much more than I had originally planned. I especially appreciated faculty library privileges and extremely professional and competent assistance at the Media Library in the person of Ms. Joan Sloan.

Activities: My stay at FIU was highly rewarding for my personal research, and I do hope, equally productive from the point of view of developing further communication between FIU and members of GEMMA consortium. Regarding my personal work, I was finalizing my research on close reading and feminist literary theory, making final revisions on an article which I have written together with my colleague Adelina Sanchez from the University of Granada. While staying at FIU I have found some new material which made us in the end to revise the article significantly. I have also done research on transnational literature (which is a part of my current project), and on new formalism and feminist theory (which is a part of my new project of feminist literary theory on which I hope to go on working together with Adelina Sanchez. I had meetings with a number of scholars from the Center for Women's Studies, discussing our respective research work, teaching experiences, and possibilities for further cooperation. While staying at FIU I have met repeatedly with Prof. Laurie Shrage, who is currently the Director of the Center. She seems interested in developing further cooperation between the Center and FIU. FIU offers undergraduate degree in Women's Studies, but does not have a corresponding MA, so they see GEMMA as a partner for further education of their students in the field. My main contact with FIU was Prof. Sarah J. Mahler, who has spent a lot of time helping me around, with all the practicalities. Thanks to her I have found my way very soon, and have managed to do a lot of work. She has also helped me with interlibrary loans, which in a couple of cases was really important for my current research. Finally she has helped me to get to know Miami better. She has organized for me to meet with the current President of FIU within one of his brainstorm meetings with the FIU faculty, which was very informative for me to understand the current state of affairs at FIU and the way they look onto the problems the university is facing in the current crisis. I had also several meetings with Prof. Barbara S. Weitz whose interests are primarily in film studies, and who is currently having a summer school in Prague dedicated mainly to Czech film, but is highly interested in enlarging the project to include Central and East European film. We have discussed a possibility to include such enlarged film school on the list of summer schools that GEMMA students can take for credit in between the first and the second year. Another important meeting was with Prof. Dawn Addy who is Director of Labor Studies at FIU and a member of Women's Studies faculty. I was a visitor with her class on feminist theory, talking to students about the state of arts in women's studies in Central and Eastern Europe. We have also talked about further cooperation between her Center and members of the consortium, in the first place CEU. Also, I have benefited from my stay at FIU getting introductory instruction in Moodle, a platform for teaching over internet, which I hope to use in future for further advancement of GEMMA program.

Activities: My one month stay at the university of Buenos Aires was academically very rewarding. The relationship with the host, Professor Nora Dominguez was excellent. She immediately responded to my mails and she assisted not only to find proper accommodation but also offered her contacts in my field of specialisation. Through her contacts I had the chance to meet experts in two major NGOs working in the field of memory and transitional justice. Professor Dominguez also organised a meeting for me, and the other Gemma Scholars at the University where we could meet with her colleagues at the university and students. I gave a brief presentation about the CEU, the Department of Gender Studies, and also about my own research. Organising the meeting was a challenge because my trip coincided with the winter break at the university, and in Argentina in general. I learned a lot about gender studies institutionalisation in Argentina, and about the state of art of gender research at the University of Buenos Aires. I had also previous contact with the F. Ebert Foundation in Buenos Aires, through which I was invited to give a talk at the Ministry of Labour to the Department of Equality of Men and Women about gender equality mechanisms in the European Union. The audience, 13 high ranking civil servants were eager to learn more about the EU and its gender equality policies. I also had the chance to meet women politicians on an other occasion, whom I had interesting discussion about the changing political climate in Latin America and in Europe. The trip was a great success and I have got two follow up suggestions. I contacted the Ambassador of Argentina to Hungary after my trip, whom I knew before my trip, and informed him about my plan to edit a book in the book series, I am editing Feminism and History about women's history in Argentina. I also contacted the Open Society Archive (Budapest) if they are interested to host the exhibition of Memoria Abierta in Budapest, one of the ngos I developed a good working relation thanks to the help of the coordinator, Professor Dominguez.

Mobility period: 16 July – 13 August, 2010

Activities: My stay in Santa Domingo at the Centro de Estudios de Genero, INTEC, has been most fruitful. The following activities, which made the trip worthwhile, are worth mentioning: The coordinator of Gender Studies, dr. Desiree del Rosario, was very friendly and helpful. We had several meetings, also with other collaborators of the department, and with other GEMMA fellowship holders from the University of Granada, e.g. dr Carmen Gregorio Gil, in which experiences were exchanged about the development of Gender studies in our various sites. Advice was sought and given on the further development of Gender Studies at INTEC. I gave a public presentation on August 11, entitled “Soy Moneda de Oro; la Cultura Sexual de las Mujeres Caribeñas” at INTEC, devoted to my work: the existence of a Caribbean sexual culture among women. This talk was well attended, by approximately 80 persons, students of Gender Studies, but also of other disciplines, deans and professors of INTEC. The talk was in English and an interpreter was provided. I later heard that the talk was well –received and followed up by conversations in various classes. In light of the fact that sexuality is a rather taboo topic, this can only be called a welcome result. I have been able to make observations of daily life, of gender and sexual relations, of the place of race, some of which I also shared in my – aforementioned - talk. Though there may not be an immediate further use for these observations (but see pt 6), for me an important and enriching part of this fellowship was the opportunity to comparatively study a Spanish- speaking part of the Caribbean, because so far I had spent time in the Dutch-, French- and English speaking Caribbean. I am certain, however, that this experience will come to fruition in future publications. My Spanish has improved significantly during the four weeks of my stay. The down side, however, was that very few people spoke English, making conversations and exchange, certainly in the beginning, rather difficult. I have read and annotated modern literature written in and about the Dominican Republic, including Mario Vargas Llosa’s The Feast of the Goat, Edwige Danticat’s The Farming of Bones, Julia Alvarez’, The Time of the Butterflies, How the Garcia Girls lost their Accents and My name is Salomé and Junot Diaz’ The brief, wondrous Life of Oscar Wao. I wrote a cycle of Dutch poems on the Dominican Republic and there still seems to be no end to this production, pointing to the deep impressions I carried with me from my stay.

Mobility period: 6 April – 31 May, 2010

Activities: I used my visiting scholarship position to get acquainted with the staff and the programmes of the Women's Studies Department at Rutgers University New Jersey. I had several conversations with Mary Hawkesworth, the women’s studies and gender studies department’s director and editor of SIGNS. We exchanged ideas about the running of a gender studies programme, the place of GEMMA therein, the bi-lateral exchanges between Rutgers and Utrecht. We also discussed our shared interest in research on transnational justice and feminist theory. Those conversations were fruitful and helped me to find my way in the department. I met with Carlos Decena, the co-ordinator of the bachelor programme and discussed the bi-lateral RU-UU exchange as well as his interest in Caribbean studies as conducted at UU. I was invited to attend several happenings at Rutgers which gave me the possibility to meet a lot of staff members and to get an idea of the functioning of the group as a whole, like several lunches, a book presentation of Ed Cohen at the Asian American writers' workshop in New York, the end of the year party, the graduation ceremonies, the goodbye party for Mary Hawkesworth. Apart from that I had bi-lateral meetings and conversations with Yana Rodgers, Josephine Diamond (on postcolonial literature), Judy Gerson (on gender and trauma research), Ed Cohen (on masculinities studies and AIDS research), Joanna Regulska (on migrations studies), Charlotte Bunch (on transitional justice). During my stay I also met other visiting scholars and discussed their projects like the CEU researcher's project on post-socialist films in central Europe. A happy coincidence was the fact that the PEN congress was taking place in NY which worked out very well in term of my current research. I had some interesting conversations with among others Toni Morrison and Marlene van Niekerk on postcolonial literature. In the meantime I took the advantage of reading quite a bit on transitional justice and the way in which that concept can benefit from feminist theory. I started the preparations for an article on the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of South Africa and the way in which some of the victims' stories occur to have become icons in SA's cultural practices like literature and visual arts. This article will be published in a special edition of the Journal of Memory Studies. I immensely profited from the opportunity to be in an other environment, speak to colleagues about both managerial and theoretical issues and used the time to refill my intellectual battery.

Activities: Desde el punto de vista de mis objetivos de trabajo, pude cumplirlos muy bien. La biblioteca de FIU tenía numerosos libros y revistas sobre geografía histórica e indumentaria por lo que mi investigación sobre los libros de trajes en el siglo XVI, se amplió y profundizó. Además mi estancia me permitió trabajar en el Wolfsonian Museum y visitar pequeños centros dedicados a la indumentaria en el sur de Florida como el Museum of Lifestyle and Fashion History (Delray, Florida). Y si bien todo lo dicho fue muy importante debo destacar sobre todas las cosas la sinergia que generó las otras profesoras de FIU o del consorcio GEMMA que estaban allí a la vez que yo. Las conversaciones y debates nos enriquecieron sobre manera. Entre ellas quiero mencionar a la Dra. Aurora Morcillo (FIU) y a la Dra. Activities: During the Action 3 GEMMA research visit, (still lasting), I have participated in the programme of feminist research at the CEIICH, UNAM, Mexico. I had opportunity to meet professors and researchers in the field of interdisciplinary feminist/gender studies from the department, as well as PhD students involving in the programme and also to participate and to give the lecture in the form of the postgraduate seminar about the feminist methodology and Yugoslav feminism. I have also participated in different activities such as seminars and lectures of different scholars in the field of my academic interest, trying to get closer with the feminist theory, methodology and epistemology from Mexico and wider from Latin America. Focusing on the research of the Mexican feminism in their comparative settings in particular with the Yugoslav feminism, in the meantime I have decided to write an research article about the studies of feminism in Mexico that will be published in the ProFemina, Journal for the women's studies and culture (2010/2011) in order to introduce less known feminist school from the European perspective, at first place, because its provide new and inspiring perspectives, ideas and practices of feminism in the term of the common – universalizing - paradigm that produce the emancipatory politics of the everyday life and feminist knowledge based on the local experiences and settings. During my research stay, the office with PC and Internet utilities and library access for the research purpose was provided by the Center. Also, the introductory presentation of the feminist/gender studies at UNAM and information about the programme activities were continually provided by the coordinator of the programme of feminist research prof. dr.
